The term is used in many fields, including anthropology, archaeology, literature, and religious studies. The term "history of the world" is also used to refer to the universal history of the universe from the Big Bang to the present. In such usage, it is often subdivided into separate chapters, such as The Cosmological History of the Universe and The Human History of the Universe. Early history Chronological framework When the world was first created, it was being made into its present form. This process was complete by roughly 9,000 BC. The framework of history was established by about 4000 BC, as indicated by the ancient Egyptians using thousands of years as a measure. However, as this period is likely not reliable, it is likely that there were no recorded dates for events prior to 5000 BC, thus known as the Dark Ages of Archaeology. The ancient Egyptians and other societies kept an interest in their history, and were the first to record their history in a time-ordered way. The use of writing was a development by the Sumerians, Babylonians, and others. The Great Wall of China, a series of walled terraces, was built in the 6th century BC to defend the northern borders of the Zhou Dynasty. The Iron Age (11th–1st millennium BC) saw the development of writing, technology, and law. This period was followed by the Ancient Greek Dark Ages and Classical Antiquity. The Roman Republic and Roman Empire (1st century BC to 5th century AD) is marked by the expansion of trade, the spread of Greek civilization, and the period of greatest Roman military success and power, and the integration of the provinces into the empire. Later, in the 20th century, historians renamed the period as the "Middle Ages" to distinguish it from "ancient" and "modern" periods. Early chronology Prehistory is the study of

Portable RightNote Activation Code For Windows

Create a whole host of notes If you're a busy person, you have lots of thoughts and ideas you need to remember. The problem with all those ideas and thoughts is that you can't always find them in the right place. A note-taking application is one of the most efficient ways to organize them, though. With Portable RightNote, you can create a whole host of notes that you can easily access and find. Sibling and child pages One of the most important features of the application is the creation of Sibling and Child pages. Sibling pages are child pages of a parent page. By selecting a parent page and dragging a sibling page, you can create multi-page notebooks that are called children. Just drag a child page on top of the parent page, and you'll be able to edit the parent and child pages as if they were one. Word, Capital and Italic You can use a text editor in the application to format your notes and text as you want it to be. As you enter text, you can format its font, size, color and alignment, just as you can when editing text in other applications. You can also insert text in different colors in a selected area. Quickly find what you're looking for This application lets you create notebooks and drag and drop files and folders to them. As you drag a file or folder into a notebook, it gets automatically named and added to the notebook. You can even add new sub-pages to notebooks and drag and drop images, sounds and documents into them. Add tags to your notes For people who use notes on a regular basis, the tags feature will prove to be a helpful addition. Simply select the text you want to tag and create a tag. You can then choose to apply the tag to a whole notebook or just to a single file. If you don't want the tag to be applied, you just have to select it and delete it. With Portable RightNote, you can create a notebook in which you can collect all the information you need. It can also be a great help when you need to find some information quickly. All you need to do is open the parent notebook and then drag and drop one of the child pages on top of it. This will make the parent and child pages appear side by side, and you can access both pages at the same time. Make sure that you can create a large number of notes If you need to create
