TIP When removing/replacing pixels, it can be helpful to remember that the top left-hand corner of the image always represents 0,0 when looking at any image on the monitor. To remove or erase pixels from an image, you can use a box selection tool (or Selection brush, as shown in Figure 1.2B) or use a Marquee tool. The Selection brush is your most basic tool. Figure 1.2C shows a Selection brush. **FIGURE 1.2C The standard Selection brush.** **FIGURE 1.2D Text with matching overlay.** You can use a range of Selection brushes to select and modify specific areas in an image and any existing pixels. If you need to create or create and modify pixels, you'll want to use the Brush tool. It's used to paint pixels into an image. Paint tools are selected with the Brush tool. Figure 1.2D shows how different brushes can be used to create different areas of an image. One way to remove an area of an image (as opposed to removing pixels from the surface of an image) is to use the Eraser tool. Figure 1.2E shows one way to use the Eraser tool. To delete all pixels from an area of an image, simply use the Eraser tool over the area. **FIGURE 1.2E A direct erasing method.** One way to remove a part of an image is to use a brush tool. Figure 1.2F shows the Eraser tool, but you can also use a brush tool to simply remove pixels or to create additional pixels. This might sound like an odd method, but you simply draw around the area of interest. **FIGURE 1.2F Creating a brush.** ## LAYERING Once you've set your image to be on a new layer (whether it's in its original or converted form), you're ready to start editing. The most common way to edit a layer is to create a new layer from the layer that you are working on. Figure 1.3A shows the original image and the layer at the top of the screen. As you can see, the new layer is transparent. To create this layer, use the New Layer button on the layers panel (Figure 1.3A). **FIGURE 1.3A Adding a new layer.** **FIGURE 1
