Chapl.Q: SQL Server : How to pass a string as a parameter to a function I am working on sql server 2008. I need to pass a string as a parameter to a function. Is this possible? If so what is the approach? A: Yes, you can use variable length parameters. DECLARE @param varchar(100) = 'I want the value that is in the variable @var' EXEC [dbo].[MyFunction] @param If you want a user variable (declared in the main code) and you want to assign it to a scalar parameter you could do the following: DECLARE @param varchar(100) DECLARE @var varchar(100) = 'I want the value that is in the variable @var' EXEC [dbo].[MyFunction] @param = @var

I would like to work in a submodule, but using git submodule, I can't work in that directory: it is a sym link, not a dir. How can I solve that? A: You can use git --work-tree as a replacement for git checkout, which will let you do any git checkout command that will work within that directory (but not in the repo that git --work-tree points to.) So you can do: cd
