Elevated plasma homocysteine has been proposed as a risk factor for cardiovascular disease. Previous studies are inconsistent, however, as to whether its ability to predict cardiovascular disease is independent of other risk factors. The term maybe is used if the principal is a 100% owner, the term may is used if the principal is a 50% owner or a term may be used if the principal is only a 25% owner. This law also says that the term is not a vote on the principal's ability, it is a vote on whether the person has a conflict of interest. If the sentence reads "he may vote" then is there a conflict of interest or not?

Answer: A In the United States, the term trust property is often used to describe trust assets (real estate, tangible personal property, intangible assets, and collectibles). It is clear from the language of this statute that the term includes real property. However, if the trust instrument provides that the trustee is a person other than the owner of the real property, the term does not include that real property. If the owner of the real property is a beneficiary of the trust, the "the term" is not a vote on the owner's ability. It would be interesting to know if the term would have to be defined in the trust instrument?

Answer: B Section 65 of the Uniform Trust Code (UTC) provides that a governing instrument provision is "the term or bequest or other provision of a trust instrument that provides or permits the trustee to make a decision to bind the trust estate to a contract or other disposition." Thus, real property can be treated as trust property if the governing instrument provides the trustee with the power to dispose of the property. In the US, these provisions are often referred to as "the term" because they always refer to the specific trust instrument.

Answer: D The UTC provides that the term does not include a power exercisable solely to pay or discharge a personal liability of the fiduciary, so in the case of a grantor trust with a personal liability for a beneficiary's contractual obligation to make a mortgage payment, the term does not include the term that authorizes the trustee to make the mortgage payment.

Answer: D Exceptions to the 50% rule (Rules of Equity) are not prescribed by the UTC, but they may be enforced by the courts in other jurisdictions to avoid situations that create conflicts of interest. The 50% rule requires that any conflict of interest be dealt with in
