+ Index Block Game - Indys (click to enlarge) July 17th, 2017 at 10:37 am Alpha Industries' Fuser™ is one of the newer tabletop boardgames to hit the stores in the last few years. At the time of this writing, we know very little about the game, so today's announcement might bring up some questions for you. My big question is how a round-based game can 'win' in 3 - 4 hours? The two things that concern me the most. Component Deck index.pdf (3.9 MB)
Component Deck for FUSER™ (click to enlarge) Problem #1: How do you win or lose in 3 - 4 hours? Unless the game is very, very buggy, you've either got a beginner's luck or your opponent/players play well This leads me to the next item: Problem #2: If the game hasn't been cracked yet, will it be possible to crack it? This isn't MY BIGGEST PROBLEM WITH the game. It's a pretty big problem to have for any game and one that I'm sure renders ZeroPlane pretty much unusable. We'll explain this in much greater detail below. Anyway, I recommend the game, but if you're part of the closed alpha and you feel a need to pre-order, go see Gabriela and say 'Hi' If you watched the pre-pre-pre-recorded video on Larry or the preview livestream, you know the game is themed around participating in over-the-top mini-games. We've been fortunate to watch the first 2.5 weeks of beta testing with the rest of the Alpha participants and while we still wouldn't call the game super playable, some basic ideas are starting to come together for us. "Fuser™" is a strategic board game of shooting minigames and concepts such as point distribution, score compensation, and goal scoring. To win, a player needs to avoid losing points. A loss in one game can easily be offset with a win in a future minigame, resulting in the same net gain or loss. In essence, the game is a real-time strategy with the most important rules hidden from the opponent. Only you know the current goals

Cats are pretty darn awesome. They don't sleep much. They don't watch TV. They don't play games. A world without cats would be...Nihil. Even if you can't stand cats, come along, let's see what happens next, the way it always does. Age Rating: E published by XBLADE GAMES on 2014-11-27 01:53:26 CSS3 Cat Game.
