India's government must do more to end sexual violence and curb trafficking of women and children in the country, the United Nations said Monday. In a report released in the week following India's general elections, the UN said violence against women continued to be widespread and was rarely prosecuted. "Violence against women was seen as a private affair with strong social norms discouraging reporting of incidents and authorities responding to complaints," said the report. The government must also take effective action against traffickers, the report said. "The government must also find ways to ensure that female victims of trafficking are protected, that they have access to justice and can seek restitution," it said. The report comes as the country prepares to celebrate its 73rd Independence Day on 15th August this year. According to a report by the government's National Commission for Women, there has been a steady rise in cases of sexual violence during the last decade.

NASA's Voyager 1 spacecraft has spotted a new planetary milestone — a giant plume of icy debris streaming away from Uranus. Plumes of icy dust, also known as ejecta, tend to be relatively rare in the Solar System. They occasionally sprout from the icy moons around Saturn and Jupiter, as well as from the surfaces of comets. But the Voyager probe has spotted one on

Uranus for the first time. "The observation of an ejecta plume on Uranus is an exciting event in the relatively short history of the Voyager mission," Richard N. Green, a planetary scientist at the University of Arizona in Tucson, said in a statement from NASA. "It fills a gap in our knowledge of the composition of Uranus' atmosphere and how the atmosphere is related to the planet's bulk composition." [
