01 - fight to the death with 10 levels of death matches 2 - collect all the goods and kill as many opponents as you can to win 3 - fight for control with the level shape shifting between your two teams
Story & Environment: The story is pretty simple. Kill everyone. In space. Six space ships will pass through the level with different colours. Purple for opponents, blue for friends. Each mission is a round where you can go on one or more of the ships with your friends. Before you go into the room with the level you will see the level and the teams with the colours of their names. When you enter the room you will fight with your friends using the available weapons and gadgets. You can play once per level, the level you play on will change after every mission. Your weapons will be counted by the rank and colour of the crew you killed with them. This will reduce the rank of your weapon so you will have to improve it to obtain it. After you have killed a crew with a weapon the rank of that weapon will change. If you can obtain a weapon that can kill multiple crews in one single shot it is a powerful weapon and will improve your ranking.

Ads that even include video ads in the "Developer TOS" box. Hats off to Microsoft for attempting to bring a slice of progressiveness to a platform that'll last for years to come. Is it a few parts cool, does it still have its downsides? Certainly. Have people forgotten that the OS was updated via the Windows 8 Update thing? Is it an awesome release? 1 person likes this
