This DLC contains: -KABAR USMC Fighting Knife - KABAR is perhaps the most famous knife of the marine corps. It was first used during World War II by the Korean resistance during the Japanese invasion. It was invented by a Korean who was upset with the Japanese for their oppression of the South Korean people during the Japanese invasion. The knife was designed with its unique right angle blade and sharpened very well for a hand made knife. Even during the Vietnam War it remained the official weapon of the Marine Corps for close quarter battle (CQB). KABAR The Knife | www.kabarknives.com -MP34 "Elite" Skin - MP34 "Elite" Skin was a skin used for the U.S.P.S. model of MP34 Shotgun. This skin was released during the Vietnam War by the Army Rangers. It even made an appearance in the Vietnam war movies "Platoon" and "Full Metal Jacket". The Army Rangers used this weapon to take out snipers and secure the area. USPS M6 "Elite" Skin | www.tacticalgearz.com -Revolver "Battle Scarred" Skin - The Revolver "Battle Scarred" Skin was designed for the single action revolver. The revolver itself is more of a side arm to the firearms. So people used them as a shoulder arm. The revolver was used during the Vietnam war and saw use during the Civil War as well. It has become somewhat of an iconic firearm for the United States. Even though it was only used for a limited amount of time, it's still very well respected and remembered. INTO THE CTHULHU MYTHOLOGY [Updated] 2022

Enter the Vampiric Domain: Master vampire lords rule the shadows. Step into their lair and reveal the secrets of the world beyond that they have kept hidden from the living. Bring the wrath of God to the Vampire Lords... and their minions. Are you brave enough to drink from the Blood Chalice of Bathori, a legendary relic that can only be taken from the crypts of some of the strongest vampire lords? Will you emerge a hero of legend or a vampire who must beg for death? Embrace your quest and prepare to enter the Vampire Lords' realm. Take your place at the shadowy court of Bathori, ruled by a family of vampires as foul and depraved as any legend has told of. And, as the first of the Vampire Lords, become a true hero. In Hell's Court, Death is the ultimate judge, and your only choice is to embrace the darkness or abandon it forever. Isabella Von Carstein Beginning play with ownership of Western Sylvania, Isabella may now be chosen to command a Grand Campaign as the leader of the Von Carstein family. In addition, Vlad has been removed from the Vampire Counts faction select screen, and may now also be chosen to lead a Von Carstein campaign. A moment of clarity: Isabella is afflicted with a wasting disease. While she may be active, her physical and mental capabilities are diminished, and she may feel weak. Dancing on the Edge of Destruction: Isabella is driven to deliver victory to the Von Carstein cause. She is also hot-headed, and may impulsively act without considering the consequences. Fear of The Unknown: Isabella is uneasy when confronted with unknown terrors. She may display flight and freeze in unusual situations, although not during battle. Battle Rage: Isabella is nothing short of a blood-thirsty monster. In a battle frenzy, she may not fear any single enemy, but attacks all opponents with increased ferocity. New in Hell's Court Blood Chalice of Bathori - As the first Vampire Lord, Isabella claims a unique regalia that grants her increased melee stats. Undying handmaidens - Isabella begins play accompanied by two Vampire Heroes. Blood rites - The Vampire Lords require blood sacrifices to sustain themselves, and are not strong enough to withstand a challenge without their priests' aid. Tempting fate - A Vampire Lord may be willingly transformed into a wight to join their familiars in combat c9d1549cdd

What's new in INTO THE CTHULHU MYTHOLOGY:

Recap | Vulture Share: Hang on for a minute...we're trying to find some more stories you might like. This episode was full of royalty intrigue — Kang Suk was revealed as a son of the king and was betrothed to the queen, the queen bore a child, and the king was revealed to have been leading a double life — although I'm finding the house of cards explanation rather lame. There's actually a better way to explain this mess: They had no way of knowing that the queen was pregnant. Adina, the only biological mother, was having an affair with the father of Kang Suk, who took on his identity and adopted Kang Suk's mother. And when the toddler king was revealed, the queen was too ashamed to acknowledge her child, and she attempted suicide, so good job on that one. House of Cards' thrillingly plan-plot-choreographed episodes make a welcome return, but the fact that Kang Suk was the apple of the queen's eye and the future heir to the throne is someone we're supposed to dislike is an uncomfortable reminder that sometimes things run completely counter to the way we want them to. I'm afraid we'll see more of this in Regeria and in this adorable drama next week. So, of course, the show has to pull out this tired same-old-thing-happens-and-forces-me-to-make-a-statement angle. Kang Suk had to turn out guilty like every kid in Korea. The king had to have Kyo hate the king of his family (even if one of the king's jobs was to adore Kyo). Kyo did some of his own scheming to manipulate the female heir into marrying him, and manipulator that he is, wondered what if the queen ran away and made her baby a ward of the state (it wasn't clear how the child came to be the queen's child in the first place). Then Kyo made it all turn out so he could live happily ever after and the baby was adopted into a lower class family and Kyo stayed happily married. What a good guy. Wouldn't that have been a nice ending to an entirely predictable story? Though, to be fair, Kang Suk was also a victim of good old fashioned royal politics and the pressure of throne. He was a lot like Ji Chang
