Receptor proteins were extracted from human erythrocytes and rat reticulocytes using 100 mM potassium thiocyanate. Protein extracts were fractionated on Sephadex G-50 columns and the specific receptor fractions isolated were characterized by both biochemical and ligand binding criteria. For human blood, four major proteins (Mr approximately 100,000, 55,000, 30,000 and 5,000) were identified and appeared to be similar to those previously characterized on rat reticulocytes. Density-gradient sucrose gradient analysis of the major receptor proteins of rat reticulocytes revealed the presence of two major fractions of specific density, 1.210 and 1.060. For both human and rat erythrocytes, the major receptor proteins were found to be lipophilic, and co-purify with ganglioside, and a radiolabelled acyl-sphingosine derivative of asialo-GM1, indicating similar ligand binding activities.The present invention relates to a magnetic disk cartridge for storing data such as computer programs, images and documents, and a drive unit for the magnetic disk cartridge. A known magnetic disk cartridge comprises a case for housing a magnetic disk, a frame for the case, an opening and closing lid for the case, a shutter for the opening and closing lid, a leader for guiding the shutter, and an arm member for opening and closing the lid. The magnetic disk cartridge is mounted on the drive unit in the following manner. First, the cartridge is inserted into a receiving portion of the drive unit. The leader of the shutter is inserted into a leader receiving portion, which is a part of the cartridge, from the opening and closing lid and engages with the leader of the drive unit. As a result, the shutter is opened, thereby enabling the magnetic disk to be inserted into a recording/playback unit of the drive unit. Then, the cartridge is inserted into the drive unit and a disk

Pentraxin-3 (PTX3) is a novel biomarker for acute myocardial infarction (AMI) in patients who present within 12h of symptom onset. We aimed to evaluate the impact of the percentage of neutrophils (PN) on the outcomes of AMI. In this prospective observational study, we included 350 patients who presented within 12h of symptom onset with chest pain and were diagnosed with AMI or unstable angina (UA). We divided the patients into 4 groups according to the percentage of PN at admission (PN  $\leq$  30%, PN 30%-50%, PN 50%-70%, and PN > 70%). The primary endpoint was the combination of cardiac death, reinfarction, 0cc13bf012

Ask HN: What do you use to create docs and write articles? - zartoshtiko I'm a beginner programmer and I'm trying to learn web development. At the moment I'm writing pages manually in Notepad++. I know there's a better way to do this and that developers use some kind of documentation editor like ReadTheDocs or just Github pages but I don't know exactly how to do it. I've also tried Coda but I'm not satisfied. I also want to cover many topics so it's not like a for-loop. So, what do you use and how do you manage such documents? ===== hntxs Before I get started I just want to give you a warning: my Go skills are terrible, which is probably obvious if you check out my profile. Despite this fact, I use [ doc]( to manage my go documentation (self-emitted content).

Recently, we both realised we had the same views on the subject of casual fishing. We both really like the idea of it, and we both think that it's a really great idea. But we both also think that it can be a bit hit and miss, and can go wrong in some unforeseen ways. After thinking for awhile about it, we both realised that we both had our moments of "frustration" on the "side" of casual. Nathan has the age thing, and that it's probably not that big a problem. I have no idea if that's a problem at all, and I've got no way of knowing from the outside, other than the fact that it has happened. It was nothing like that with Nathan, and he was much younger than me when he said it. I suppose it could be a problem for me too, and I can't be sure. I really don't know. We're both "frustrated" when it comes to casual fishing. We both like the idea of casual fishing, but don't like it when it goes wrong, and we have our moments of frustration along the way. We both have the "that can't be good, and it's too late to pick up the pieces and fix it" feeling whenever things don't go to plan
