You control one of 4 characters (Blaz, Rocket, Grease, or Mouse) to traverse large, beautiful 3D maps and blast various types of enemies. NitroBLAZER offers an experience very different from your typical action titles. You are in control of an arcade-styled shooter controlled through a top-down perspective. You are not driving fast through the levels; instead, you are controlling a whirling platform in first-person perspective to battle enemies and collect enough points to reach the end. Modes: Arcade mode Easy game play mode: No score limit. Normal game play mode: High score and time limit. Arcade mode is just like the game's name: You blast stuff and complete levels. Easy and Normal game play mode is similar to the game's name: You blast stuff and collect as many points as you can. How to play: Select a game mode. Press/Hold left mouse button to move platform left/right, including jumping. Release the mouse button to shoot. Press left mouse button to rotate platform forward/backward, including climbing. Release the mouse button to activate character's special attack. Easy and Normal game play mode has players compete to be the best (and only) one player to pass certain levels in each of the game play modes. During play, you are able to use a joystick to play the game in Custom mode. Try to defeat all of the enemy fleets in each stage.

What's new:

Well-Known Member I probably spent $500ish for the Venom Snake chain. The last time I rode the Venom Snake (bought a 79' RC2) I only had one bike with a 10x42". The bike was a little top heavy for nice high speed stuff. I'm taking it to stunt riding for the winter. Will give it a shot the new season for sure. Definetly gives the bike a lighter feel. Member I really like my VANGARDT. I think the crowd that runs the Venom Snake's are the people who like the looks of the Snake, not the who's better than who. I've had the Venom Snake for about 1 year now and really enjoy it. I'm going to look to upgrade the SED with the new Chameleon wheel as well. I'm also looking for the Musketeer as there a bigger tire and a stronger design Member Do you feel anything different with the chain on vs off? I had a 09 Venom Snake with nothing but the new MHE chain but I really liked the reds better than the black. With a Venom

Snake I'm the only one using the website for your info on potential breakage so I'm wondering if I should just go with the one chain for everybody on the forum. I'll most likely be trying to find a good set of BCD's to go on. Well-Known Member With the new ST10 MHE chain your going to be hard pressed to find a set of BCD's that keeps up with what the Venom Snake chain alone will eat. Specially after heavy times with the MHE chain set up on the Venom Snake ST10/12. They are currently only being used exclusively by Fox Machine of Indy and that is the only shop keeping the old MHE set up on their bikes. The other MHEs in Indy are all running the HSG 110 chains to support the overtravel of the Venom Snake ST10 chassis. I would recommend initially going with a set of HSG's with a wider link pattern if you plan on running the Venom Snake chassis on high travel bikes. I had an 09 Venom Snake runs the 9x50 setup alone and on the SED. It was a nice set up but kept breaking chains. After relocating one set of chainstays to the rear it afforded better chain guarding and prevented the chain on the rear from wearing down as much. With the
