I'm in a situation where I'm designing a class that happens to behave very similarly to a large already existing class, and I want to reuse the design pattern used for the large existing class rather than having to re-do everything about the new class from scratch. Is there a design pattern that I can use to reuse the design for the large existing class? EDIT: So, my current situation is I have the following: Class A. Class B Class C And I want a class D that has the same functionality as Class A bus also has functionality that's similar to functionality in Class B. I.e. Class A has a particular method that returns an Object of type C. Class B has a similar method that returns Object of type B. Now, I know that I can just implement the code twice in Class D, but then my other classes don't have to know about the duplication, and for example I can just have them do stuff with the returned object and not need to know about the existence of classes B and C. What design pattern can I use to reuse the design for Class A, but only have Class D have the new stuff added to it? A:
