If you notice your H323 IP PBX is not registered on the H323 service. To Fix this, you will have to purchase a new H323 IP PBX or procure someone with a working license. Using a H323 IP PBX without having your registration is illegal! How to Fix this: You must be able to find a working H323 IP PBX on your local area network (LAN). You can find this IP PBX by visiting the IP PBX manufacturer website and downloading the install utility, which will download the IP PBX software on your computer. The IP PBX manufacturer will give you the IP PBX serial number, so you can find the registration information in the registration database. Important Note: If you do not have a registered H323 IP PBX on your LAN, you must purchase a new H323 IP PBX. How to Fix this: I followed the instructions, and when I copy the files to the server it doesnt say that the files were copied. I copied them to a different folder and when I made a upload it says that the file wasnt copied and now I cant update any more on the control panel because of that error. The other things i tried are not working. I have tried to type the server path and the old path and both didnt work. I have read through the posts and really dont know what to do from there. Im pretty new to server adminning and I dont really understand whats going on. Could someone please help me? How to Fix this: Because the information that you put into your virtual server will not be kept between versions of vSphere, you should periodically copy your configuration files to a location where they won't be overwritten. How to Fix this: I have posted my response. Still not working. The thing is my server was never hit, from what I can see. When i created the vars file it gave me this error. i read that this would happen when there is some bug, but with all the updates and the fact that my server was never hit I really dont see how I would get hit by a bug from a line in a vars file. How to Fix this: Does it really mean my server has been hit by a bug because of the mistake in the vars file?Mobile phone manufacturers are being forced to innovate and apply the best of new technology in order to protect user data in order to survive and thrive in the cut-throat
