“With our vision that gameplay and video can be further enhanced in an engaging and dynamic manner, ‘HyperMotion’ is a technological breakthrough that is changing the way we work and play with the game,” said Aaron Giestal, Executive Producer of FIFA. “FIFA 22 is the most immersive and exciting FIFA yet, and our partnership with Motion Network will make this a reality for players everywhere.” “We are extremely proud to have been given the opportunity to work alongside FIFA to bring this technological innovation to life,” said Scot Kershaw, CEO at Motion Network. “Motion Network’s expertise in recognising and capturing in-motion data for video games is helping to revolutionise the way these games are played, and we look forward to continuing our work with FIFA to bring motion capture technology to the FIFA series.” The motion capture data collected during game play will be further processed and enhanced by the FIFA Studios team, adding to the authenticity and credibility of the game’s gameplay. The data will enable for EA Sports to create new modes of play and content for FIFA to help deliver an even deeper, more complete game experience. The introduction of the HyperMotion technology will be supported with a comprehensive motion capture kit available worldwide for professional footballers to take part in when creating their custom player motion capture data. Using a high performance Cybermotion suit, real-life players will be able to apply a layer of reality to their gameplay with the HyperMotion. Available in June 2016, FIFA 22 will be the first game in the series to feature the new technology from the outset. The Madden NFL 17 series and NHL 17 will be the next two games to include the technology after they have been developed. FIFA Player Jerseys and Apparel To celebrate the FIFA-Motion Network partnership, the FIFA apparel line will be updated this summer with a selection of new FIFA 22 jerseys and shorts. The new FIFA jerseys will feature the latest FIFA 22-inspired graphics and details, and the fabric tech will allow for more breathable performance. The selection of shorts will include comfortable training wear for casual play, as well as a performance-fit short for concentrated training sessions and game day.
