A UN-led joint mission is visiting Bangladesh's Ofla International Hospital, the site of last week's attack on Rohingya refugees, in an effort to conduct an independent investigation. Meanwhile, Bangladesh is intensifying efforts to establish the facts surrounding the killing, and the United Nations appealed to Myanmar to speed up the process. "The visit to the hospital will help us to make a diagnosis of the causes of the tragedy, and that is really what we must be doing," said Koichiro Matsuura, the secretary-general of the UN's refugee agency, UNHCR. "We hope that the Myanmar authorities are ready to cooperate with us in the interest of both sides, and that is the only way forward," he added. The visit, which began on Sunday, is due to last until at least Saturday and is led by a team from the International Organization for Migration, consisting of representatives from Bangladesh, Myanmar and UNHCR. Two doctors, a forensic expert and a medical journalist from Reuters are also on the mission. The team will conduct an inspection of the site, which came under attack on 25 August in which three members of the security forces were killed and 22 Rohingya people were injured, and take measurements of the damage caused. The Rohingya refugees are setting up a camp in the Ofla area, which is being guarded by Bangladeshi forces, to allow the inspectors to enter. According to UN estimates, some 200,000 people have taken shelter in the area since the violence. Facts and no facts? Myanmar has denied being responsible for the bombing, while UN officials have charged that the attack was carried out by the military, and by Ko Tee, the Aung San Suu Kyi-led government's de facto leader, who is also the minister of home affairs. Rights groups say there is evidence that security forces carried out the attack, but that many Rohingya people were killed in indiscriminate firefights. "The evidence we have points in that direction," said George K. Tipton, UN regional expert on protection of human rights in Myanmar, after the first visit to the area by a UN mission. "Our first observation is the security forces are gone, but our second observation is it has become the responsibility of the military and the police to preserve order and safety," he said. ♦
