(2) A credible person providing the record of such conviction to such person under this subparagraph shall be prohibited from receiving a waiver under the Federal Youth Corrections Act, and the person convicted shall not thereafter be eligible for probation or parole until two years after the date of such conviction. By the plain terms of the statute, both Taveras and Johnson were eligible for pretrial diversion and both were treated as if they had been eligible. But, as to both Taveras and Johnson, under the clear terms of the statute it was absolutely mandatory that the prosecutor provide the required certification to the court prior to the start of their trials. As to Johnson, the prosecutor filed the required certification three months before the start of her trial. However, on the day Johnson's trial began, March 20, 2004, less than four weeks before trial was to commence, the prosecutor filed no certification. Under these circumstances, this court should conclude that the statute is not applicable to Johnson. III. Conclusion The statute in question plainly, unambiguously, and categorically does not apply to Johnson. The circuit court was without jurisdiction to try Johnson on the charge of a felony on March 20, 2004. Accordingly, the circuit court's judgment is reversed, and this case is remanded for a new trial. Reversed and remanded. Judges McGEE and TYSON, concur. NOTES [1] The certified copies of the record of
