Here's a tiny bit of a preview about my experience at EGX with the preview build of the game, which I managed to demo a bit. It's real early. we're only 2 days in and the game already looks great. And so does the trailer, so there's that. We got a special preview of the game and a run of the game in VR. Which I think is a pretty new experience for us. Because I don't think I've ever been to a session of VR before, it's definitely a new experience for me at least. And I must say, the experience of playing the game inside of VR is excellent. I tried it a few times, I got motion sick a bit, but I was never once uninterested in playing again. The experience of running around freely in the world, seeing and feeling everything around you, is incredible. And I haven't experienced anything like it before. I felt like I was actually there. The gameplay of it all feels really good and the VR does a really good job of making everything feel smooth, including the combat. You can really feel the power of your strikes and attacks, and it does make combat really satisfying to attack and see the damage done. I really enjoyed it and it's nice to see that it's actually really good at making combat feel good as well. Speaking of the combat, I was especially interested in how the magic worked in the game. I've never really known how to use a lot of tactical magic in all my battles. And so it was nice to see that a lot of the spells had a button that would show the damage done, so it was really easy to compare how much damage they did. And then there were others that didn't have a spell button, but you just had to hover the spell to see the damage done. The camera in VR mode is also really good, to the point where it feels like I'm on the same level as the enemies. You can really look around freely and see what's going on. And it was really fun to play because of it. All in all, I really enjoyed my time with the game, and I really look forward to playing it with my friends who I'll meet up with at the convention. And you really get a sense of what the game is like in this early state. So look forward to more impressions when I get to bff6bb2d33
