You should change it to var x = 10; alert(x); x++; alert(x); // 10 Or you can use let : function func() { let x = 10; alert(x); x++; alert(x); // 10 } func();

Hellpoint Soundtrack Game Description

You are in a contaminated... what?? A research facility! It appears this research firm has been decommissioned, but you can't even go out the back way. You have to go through the window. The sounds you hear aren't natural. They are a kind of raw energy, like a million cameras rolling simultaneously. The sounds come in numerous waves which cause your ears to adjust your inner ear processors to compensate for the external sounds. This gives you the feeling that you are being pressed from all sides at once You were not supposed to reach this part of the facility. You were escorted here by a group of militant ordered to keep your passes hidden. If you try and leave the facility, we'll kill you on the spot and you won't be leaving here alive. Your memory of everything that took place on this day will be erased. The whole record of this experiment will be destroyed by your death. But somehow, you are here. What is this place? What the.... This isn't even medicine-hall! What is this company doing here? Did it survive?

The addition of each color and gray stimulus to the black-and-white streams increased BOLD sensitivity and the proportion of significant voxels. The addition of voxels most likely representing color-pop-out at the near-threshold contrast of 0.12 and of voxels most likely representing color-potency and cancellation induced a significant increase in sensitivity and the proportion of significant voxels in all three regions (Table 1{ref-type="table"}). The estimates of the contrast model parameters  $a^$  and  $h^$  for these regions and contrasts obtained with subsequent analysis of the contrast images reveal the additive weight of the added stimulus information (Table 1{ref-type="table"}). For all regions, the additive weight of color was larger than that of gray. For higher contrasts where additive color and additive gray could be disambiguated and collinear color and gray could be detected as different, the sum of color and gray was greater than the sum of color-pop-out and color-potency and cancellation (Table 1{ref-type="table"}). Interregional correlations {#sec015} ----- While explaining a proportion of the variance, (H)C contrasts enhanced the correlation between the lateral occipital (LO) and fusiform (F) regions (Table 2{ref-type="table
