Note Adobe also has a bundle of products called the "Creative Suite" for image editing, page layout, and so on. The bundle is great for beginning to intermediate users because it has lots of features and tools in one. For the beginner, it is also extremely flexible and provides a good jumping-off point for exploring other features. The Creative Suite includes the following applications: Photoshop CS, Illustrator CS, Premiere Pro, and After Effects. You can get the bundle at the Adobe Creative Suite website at www.adobe.com/creative-suite/. The main operating environment for working with Photoshop is the Windows operating system. Mac owners may wish to use Photoshop on a Mac and get the latest update through the Mac App Store. ## The Photoshop Interface When you open Photoshop, a number of layers and tools are available on a selected tool bar or palette. Each layer in an image has a name and a corresponding layer mask. When you view the image, the layer mask (see Figure 1-1) determines the image's transparency. For each selected tool, you can choose a range of tools and tools parameters.

Q: Firewall rules and subdomains I have a server and a digitalocean droplet running on it. Each has its own IP. I have added *.example.com to the /etc/hosts file on the server's droplet so I can use it for development. Now, I want to create a firewall rule that allow a certain IP address (example.com) but not allow all traffic on my IP network interface. I want the traffic to be allowed only between the droplet and the server. How can I create this kind of rule in ufw? The last rule that allows that IP is: ALLOW OUT 22 A: you can create a iptables chain called "INPUT" and write the above rule on it. Then create a new chain called "OUTPUT" and call iptables -L INPUT -nvx and you will see a long list of IP addresses and their rules for OUTPUT chain. Rule 1 Rule 2 Change the "1" to "0" and add the IP address in question and it should be OK. The rules apply to the OUTPUT chain also. Q: Autofac - RegisterDecorator and RegisterChild for services that implement IUnityContainer Say I have 2 services public interface IEntityService { IList GetEntities(); } and public interface IContextService { IContext CreateContext(); } Both implement IUnityContainer public interface IEntityContainer : IUnityContainer { void Resolve(); } and they use a Entity Framework ServiceProvider public class EntityFrameworkServiceProvider : IServiceProvider { public IServiceProvider CreateServiceProvider() { return new ServiceCollection().AddEntityFrameworkInMemoryDatabase().BuildServiceProvider(); } } Then I register the services. var builder = new ContainerBuilder(); builder.RegisterType(); builder.RegisterType().Named

Q: Spring MVC - ModelAttribute vs "raw" HttpServletRequest When sending a form to a Spring MVC controller, how do the ModelAttribute and RequestParam/HttpServletRequest objects get passed to the method? I understand that the RequestParam is mapped directly to the method parameter, and the ModelAttribute is bound to the method parameter via a property. This is also confirmed in the DispatcherConfig documentation. My question is, how does this mapping occur, and how is the HttpServletRequest object used? My concern is that the HttpServletRequest seems to be too late; the values are already in the request. A: When sending a form to a Spring MVC controller, how do the ModelAttribute and RequestParam/HttpServletRequest objects get passed to the method? By using the ModelAttribute. I.e. spring mvc intercepts the submit of the form and uses the ModelAttribute to bind the input parameters of the form. My question is, how does this mapping occur, and how is the HttpServletRequest object used? The actual value of the HttpServletRequest object is used to set the fields of the ModelAttribute. This "mapping" occurs by creating an instance of a ModelMapping object, and then calling its setAttributeNames(...) method. If the ModelAttribute object is used without a model attribute, it will default to binding to the fields in the HttpServletRequest. Splenic hematopoiesis. II. Developmental sequence of erythroid cells and spleen erythropoietin. The onset of splenic erythropoietin (Sp-Ep) production in marmosets (Callithrix jacchus) was studied by determining the nucleated erythroid cell and soluble erythropoietin contents of spleens taken at defined developmental time points. Both Sp-Ep and the earliest detectable nucleated erythroid cells (NEC) appeared by the first trimester of gestation and were increased in numbers as gestation proceeded. A peak in Sp-Ep content occurred at birth and correlated with high levels of total reticulocytes. Total reticulocyte content decreased dramatically during the first 2 weeks of life to levels of adult marmosets. Levels of both NEC and Sp-Ep reached adult levels by the end of the
