Welcome to Deadly Way Game! This game requires the use of your touch screen (iPhone, iPad, iPod, iTouch, etc.) to complete challenging challenges. Each game level has a theme and a difficulty. For example: the level "Living on the edge" is very demanding and you need to make sure you don't touch the edge of the level. There are 2 modes of gameplay. In the survival mode you must complete each level without dying or running out of time. In this game mode the time is slow. In the time trial mode you have 3 seconds to complete a level before it is over. In this game mode the time is fast. Also, you can play the easy game mode if you want to practice before completing the other game modes. Deadly Way is the highest rated game with over 4.5 million ratings. Looking for a better game? Try 'JOYAL' What's New * Bug fix : Fixed few glitches and some bugs caused by upgrades * Bug fix : When you complete the last level, you may see a blank screen and the game will end * Bug fix : After you complete level 4 and level 5, you may see an inactive icon or an empty icon on the counterQ: How to set repeat for bootstrap modal I have a HTML page with several modal bootstrap. The first one is open on page load, I want to set that modal will be same after loading the page or after clicking on button. I use jQuery to open bootstrap $(document).ready(function(){ $("#myModal").modal('toggle'); }); Open Modal

To defend their base, the Syndicate is sent out to recover their mission cube. To reach their target cube, they must avoid the traps that are out to stop them. The gameplay is very simple. You have to carry a payload of cubes around the level. The trick is the number of steps to reach your destination. If the number is even, you can pass through the obstacle. If the number is odd, you must avoid the obstacle. Obstacles can be a crate, a laser beam, a spike or a trap. You have to make sure the cube you choose can avoid them. Some obstacles will follow the cube as it moves through the level. Then you have to get your cube to the target cubes position before they move. The enemy cubes move in the same direction as you, and your cube does the same but backward. If you step off a platform, it will fly away, but a box can control the platform so you can step on it and pass through it. When a platform is next to the edge, it becomes a jumping platform. This can also be controlled with a box. The movement is very easy to control. A click is to move the cube forward. A spacebar makes it jump over an obstacle, while a left mouse click makes the cube move around an obstacle. The controls are very easy to use. A spacebar makes it jump over an obstacle, while a left mouse click makes the cube move around an obstacle. The controls are very easy to use. To pass through a box, the cube has to be near the bottom edge. You can press and hold down the middle of the cube to change the width of the path. You can move the boxes by clicking them. To avoid traps, you need to click a box near a trap to jump over it. You can tap an obstacle to make it follow you. You can swipe to use your hand as a catapult. When you are going to jump, the time it takes is based on the number of steps. When you jump, you go in the direction the cube is facing. You can tap on a box or wall to put it in a catapult. It is very easy to use, just use the directional buttons for the cube to make the right actions. There are

What's new in Potatoe:

Each class has a leader with several skill trees, all of which are similar, but with certain skills more useful at certain times. Granted, they all contribute to their own problems. Basically, if you find one class to be exceptionally good, and get it out of his way, one of the other classes should be able to break through. Or, if you're a great pilot for one particular class but are not quite good enough for one of the others, you might be able to get an edge by either going ground or flying with a transhuman. The Rare, or Bioweapon version of an old man or woman gets more damage, while the Invuln version is the 'conventional' heavy, like the old man or woman. The Decoy is similar to the 'conventional' heavy, but you can fire more often and it gets great range. The class with the lowest man amount in a cruise missile is the Assault class, which is only armed with an Assault SMG. There's a reason for this: it's not so much a variety of weapons as it is having nothing. It is possible to use these 2 turrets to effectively negate the damage that you're receiving, and a ship with the Assault class in a TKN has a great chance of getting an Assault kill without taking serious damage, which might be its ultimate goal (though not saying it is). We have yet to find any difference between the TK and BAT, but they seem to work the same way. It's nearly impossible to kill someone with one of these, as you're going to first take damage to the turret, and then you're going to take damage to yourself. It's a pretty bad deal. When fighting Quantum Drives, SP is the most useful, as it never increases action points, and Power Beam is invaluable to take out enemy ships that are close enough to hit your shields (see the last note for more information). Hacking is essential to the success of most missions, as it allows you access to the various things, such as Arbiters, or to the TKI station, which has the ability to repair ATN and restore some level of energy to the ships. Power Ups Power Ups are then dealt out in the order you collected them, and some can be pretty significant. The first one is the Refit, which increases your stock level. The
