He grew up in Woodstock, Georgia, and graduated from Vanderbilt University. Hartsell worked as a session musician, songwriter, producer and writer, primarily in Nashville, Tennessee. He has won four Emmy Awards for the HBO series True Blood. Biography Gerry Hartsell was born in Nashville, the only son of record producer Gordon Hartsell and his wife Helen. His younger brother is actor and musician, Doug Hartsell. He attended Vanderbilt University. He spent several months in 1975–76 in Paris on a Fulbright Grant. As a teenager, he helped support his family by acting, mostly in improvisational comedy and musical variety shows. He worked on the music and comedy sides of shows, sometimes as a singer, songwriter, and/or producer. He first met and became friends with long-time collaborator Stephen Moyer, when the actor was the musical guest on his father's comedy show, The Randys. In the mid-1980s, Hartsell moved to Los Angeles to work on such shows as Designing Women, Sister Kate, and Designing Women in Season 7. In 1987 he wrote and performed "I Don't Know Why" with Emmylou Harris, Wynonna Judd and Hank DeVito, which was a #1 country hit. He was the music director for Designing Women and starred as Michael Man, the incorrigible brother of Delta Burke's character (who lived with Burke at the same apartment building). From 1992–2001, Hartsell directed episodes of CBS's MacGyver. He directed episodes of the TV series Baywatch and has directed several TV movies, most notably The Mentalist, The Patriot and Star Trek. He has three Emmy Awards for his work on the HBO drama series True Blood, winning Best Directing for Season 3, Season 4 and Season
