and then run the setup program for the db. I will be doing that in a bit. However, when I go to "Oracle Universal Installer" it's blank. I have to log in and register. The license comes with it. I download the drivers for the correct version of the OS. The file is 23.1 gigs. It's a zip file. Do I choose "Download and Install" or "Install" or what? A: There are a number of things that need to be set correctly before you can begin. It's possible you have one of these issues: You do not have the correct Oracle Client installation, as your Oracle database installation was removed If you did have the correct installation, it's possible one of the Oracle Client installation components is corrupted If you did have the correct Oracle Client installation, or you already have the correct installation, but it's been uninstalled but not properly removed. So, you can either run the Oracle client installer again, or simply launch the program from your OS You don't have the correct Windows Firewall rules and/or services enabled on your computer You don't have the right privileges (to access the local system files and registry) You are not a member of the Administrators Group on your computer, or you don't have rights to install software on the system It's also possible you don't have a valid Oracle Client 32-bit installation associated with your current Oracle Client installation (32-bit or 64-bit). In order to set this up properly, you can either run the Oracle Client installer from your OS again, or simply launch the installer for your Oracle Database. Did You Know That Women With Thigh Fat Are More Likely To Have A Heart Attack? Women who have thighs and hips are much more likely to have a heart attack, says a new study published in the journal Archives of Internal Medicine. Many women have been wanting to know whether or not there is a correlation between having thigh fat and their heart health. The study, published this week, was conducted by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) and found that women between the ages of 50 and 79 who had a BMI (body mass index) of more than 35 were twice as likely to have experienced a heart attack than women with a healthy BMI. It was also discovered that women with large thighs and hips were 10 times more likely
