Scott Henderson, six-string guitar and voice, with his own music and jazz.Amid the profusion of readings at Logan Airport a few weeks ago, I was delighted to spot the cover of a recent Princeton University Press edition entitled The Wildest Ride: The Life and Times of the Motorcycle. The story of the motorcycle, written by Robert Dickinson and illustrated by Howard Gardner, is a wonderful celebration of machines of all sizes and kinds, from the bicycle to the car and beyond. If you don't already know who Howard Gardner is, let me introduce you. As a psychologist, Gardner is most well known for his theory of multiple intelligences. He has published dozens of books and articles, and co-authored the classic Frames of Mind: The Theory of Multiple Intelligences. I first learned of Gardner's work while reading "The Art of Building Rockets," an engrossing, entertaining and well-written long-form article published in The New Yorker. The article was about a contest called the Ansari X Prize, which would challenge researchers to develop a vehicle that could fly around the earth at seven times the speed of sound. Gardner, a professor at Harvard, describes his study of multiple intelligences, which he terms "multiple ways of knowing." Those intelligences include visual-spatial, linguistic, logical-mathematical and musical. He notes that the title of his multi-intelligence study is attributed to a colleague who declared, "Gardner is the thinking person"
