Both Mr. Carson and Mr. Bannon will work closely with Ms. Trump, who has called Mr. Bannon a "brilliant political innovator" and a "fantastic guy." They are expected to act as advisers to her in the coming weeks as she tries to build a staff, beef up her campaign operation and prepare for what is certain to be an expensive general-election campaign. "If the president-elect were to run for office, he'd be a great president," Mr. Bannon said on Friday, referring to Mrs. Clinton. "That's not what the president is running for," he said, adding: "And to know that the president-elect is the legal nominee of our party, that's a huge thing." Mr. Bannon met with Mr. Trump in New York earlier this month to discuss his new role and how he could best work alongside Mr. Trump. During their meeting, Mr. Bannon pitched his former job as the executive chairman of Breitbart News, his social media hub for the right, which appeared to intrigue and excite Mr. Trump, a political novice. Mr. Bannon also met separately with Kellyanne Conway, the president-elect's campaign manager. Mr. Bannon will report directly to Mr. Trump, bypassing the office of Mr. Pence, who will remain as chairman of the Republican National Committee. Mr. Bannon, a former Goldman Sachs investment banker, is an imposing figure and often talks as though he is preparing a monologue. His opposition

Lose: thin ice, a post-partum kit and not having a finished product to show off to Mom We recently completed our summer home renovation with a new kitchen. It's our first time doing all the work, but we know what we want and our contractor has done a terrific job. We've taken into account our, as well as my grandmother's, comments — and want to know if we've done a good job. We've had several people — friends, contractors, etc. — look at our progress. The last time was a few weeks ago. Several asked us how it looks and we reminded them that it still needed shingles on the roof. I actually looked at their advice and concluded it was a pretty accurate assessment of our project. But I ignored it. I know what I want my kitchen to look like, and I think our contractor has achieved that. Plus, I am waiting for Mom's approval. She likes the kitchen, but wants to change it. In fact, I got the sense that she wanted it to be more like the original kitchen that we designed (painted) when the house was built in 1949. I took her from her bedroom and showed her our new kitchen (and we even have a functioning kitchen stove). I also showed her the kitchen we're renovating in there, too. Mom said she thinks our kitchen is fine — definitely not as grand as our original kitchen. I have to disagree — the new one is nearly finished. Mom's comments made me realize we're going to have to tell her she can't have the kitchen she wants. Or we're going to have to do something to make it look like the original kitchen. Maybe remove the windows in our kitchen and replace them with larger windows in the front of the house. If that is the case, I'm all for that 6d1f23a050
