This study evaluated the impact of a health promotion programme on the health knowledge, attitudes and practices of mothers of young children in a school setting. It was a quasi-experimental, community-based study. The study was conducted in 15 schools that had implemented the programme in one wave and in 15 schools that had implemented the programme in another wave. The intervention schools received the programme in January and the control schools received it in March. The study employed a self-administered questionnaire measuring health knowledge, attitudes and practices of mothers. A total of 723 questionnaires were completed. High-risk behaviour was present in 2.5% of the study group and in
