Noise is a major factor in man's exposure to noise. Health effects of noise depend on the type of exposure, the intensity and the duration of exposure, and on pre-existing susceptibility. Acute exposure to high intensity noise, brief exposure to intense noise, or sensory overload can have effects that last longer than a few hours. The pattern of exposure is also relevant for the effects on health. Extreme noise exposure can have cumulative or long-lasting effects on the hearing system. Conversely, frequent repeated exposure to moderate levels of environmental noise, that could be maintained for a lifetime, is the most prevalent cause of hearing loss in industrialized countries and the first reported environmental cause of hearing impairment in children. Noise is an extreme physical event with complex effects on the auditory system, resulting from processes of acoustic amplification, conduction and reflection of sound at the tympanic membrane. Noise can induce permanent and temporary alterations in the auditory system and peripheral signal processing

So my question is: how to do it in a programmable way in a php script? So I think of a method like this: I have a script that formats my data into XML and also stores it into a table in the database. A client from a different system can ask for that data in a certain format. Thus I have to write a php script that reads the data and gives it to the client in that format. How do I go about doing it? I am using PHP, MySQL. A: You can get the formatted data from your database by using a query $query = mysql_query("SELECT datum, kopas FROM kopas"); then, you can get it and format it as xml like this: You can parse the element out of
