As Tribune-Byler Insurance Services President Dale Studer said Wednesday on the company's website, "the city just took a hammer and they smashed the venue." The downtown Oklahoma City convention center was used as an emergency shelter for displaced survivors of Sunday's tornadoes. Two city officials have said the center is being billed for the cost of $2.2 million in damage to the facility. Studer said he will hire an attorney to defend his company against what he calls the city's "persecution." "Our goal is to take some of the heat off the city, as we have been doing," he said. City Manager Robert Layne said the city is still negotiating with the insurance company and hasn't decided what to charge the insurer for the cost of disaster cleanup. "We're not at the point where we've decided how we're going to collect any money for that cleanup and repairs," Layne said. "We've got to work with the insurance company. We are still in negotiation." The city has received from Tribune-Byler more than $830,000 for damages to the convention center, streetlights and other sites. A $2.2 million tab for cleanup and repairs at the center has resulted in about 70 requests for reimbursement for the city, and the amount being demanded is adding to that total, Layne said. Mark R.
