My programmer is trying to convince me to move to .net with PHP. I've always disliked this idea because of the cost. But he tries nonetheless. What can I do? What do I need to learn to convince him that .NET is a great technology? I've been working with PHP for several years now. I love .NET, but feel like I'll have to work much faster with .NET than with PHP. I've read that .NET is not compatible with PHP and I'm starting to think that's true. It can not be true. What is the difference between .NET and .NET-based languages? What do I need to know to learn .NET programming? I would like to hear your thoughts. Best regards, David J.
