Ä is the 21st letter of the Latin alphabet and the ISO 9 alpha-2 (also known as the extended latin alphabet) script. It is romanized in the IPA either as [a] or â (with palatalization). Like the other Cyrillic letters, it has two uppercase (and two lowercase) variants. It represents the voiced alveolar fricative [ħ] in English and possibly also in other variants of the English language. The letter Ä was introduced in Unicode in 1996. The name is sometimes rendered in the IPA as [ħ̥], [ħ̥], or [ə̥] (the latter with a ŝ (ŝusen) ligature). The Unicode name "Ä" is to be preferred over "ä". Indeed, ä is the name used for the "Sharmani" (Quranic name for the Ä vowel) in the Egyptian dialects.
